The 2020 Census is here, which means that soon it will be time for another redistricting cycle. In this talk, I'll survey metrics that have been proposed for evaluating districting plans, as well as the pitfalls that often come with these scores. I'll also discuss some emerging research in the mathematics of redistricting, including my own work.